In-Home Behavior Support

Why In-Home Behavior Support?

Is your loved one exhibiting challenging behaviors in the home?

Are you looking for strategies to try to better manage behavior?

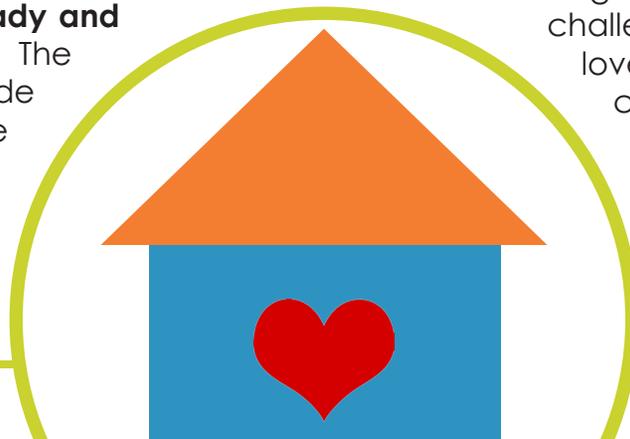

Is your loved one aggressive, self-injurious or noncompliant?

Do you want to learn about behavior management and modification, and how to apply the knowledge to your current situation?

In-Home Behavior Support, through Wildwood's Family Support Services, provides resources to better equip families to meet behavioral challenges in positive and meaningful ways.

Who is Eligible for Services?

Children, adolescents and adults of all ages who are currently OPWDD eligible and living at home with family members may receive these services. Support is provided to individuals who exhibit challenging behaviors and to their family members. Families must be ready and willing to participate in the program. The goal of all behavioral services is to provide families with the tools needed to manage challenges on their own by learning and continuing plans beyond the duration of support for long-lasting effectiveness.

Types of In-Home Behavior Support

- In-Home Behavioral Consultation
- Functional Behavioral Assessment and Individualized Behavior Support Plan
- Social Work Counseling to Support Behavior Programming

In-Home Behavioral Consultation

In-Home Behavioral Consultation provides an initial meeting with a behavior specialist to discuss the family's current situation and concerns. They will then meet weekly or biweekly to further discuss these issues and concerns, as well as strategies for managing challenging behaviors, such as difficulties with: mealtime, using the bathroom, elopement and aggression. This program will last for up to 6 months.

Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA) and Behavior Support Plan (BSP)

Is it difficult to determine what causes challenging behavior of your loved one? Do you struggle with their challenging behavior on a day-to-day basis? Are challenges impacting the quality of life for your loved one and your family? If so, a FBA can be conducted to track and analyze patterns of behavior. Results will be used to develop individualized behavior support strategies based on the function(s) of behavior. This program will last for up to 6 months.
